The societal engineering aspect will also be delved into for developing a smart infrastructure of inclusive nature as well as creation of newer job openings. The theme 'Smart Engineering for a Better Future' also encompasses issue of environmental sustainability. There can't be a common well-established roadmap towards building a smart infrastructure for the entire world. Localized and Customized solutions shall have to be worked out by collective wisdom of Professional Engineers and the Academia focusing on the varying local needs.

Keynote Speaker Er. Niraj A. Shah, Chairman, Computer Society of India (CSI), Ahmedabad Chapter gave his presentation on the theme "Smart Engineering for a Better World" with examples & demonstration through audio-visual presentation. An interesting commonality in the nature of these challenges is dealing with massive levels of digitization and generation of data. These perceived challenges are veiled opportunities to leverage data science and analytics and thereby induct smart engineering to deal with major global challenges, such as adverse effects of climate change, water scarcity, mixed energy usage, reducing the digital divide among others. The engineering profession is undergoing a paradigm shift with the induction of digitization and emphasis on man-machine interface. Investing in capacity building to ensure smart delivery of civic services will serve the broad societal interest with ramifications leading to establishment of effective and accountable governance system congruent to our needs.
